Use Cases

Sales Promotions

With an estimated open rate of 99%, business text messaging is an extremely attractive option for promoting sales. Findings from the same study indicate that 90% of those opens occur within three minutes of receiving the message.

Marketing Campaigns

If you work/have worked in marketing, you may have heard of the “rule of seven”. It suggests that you have to reach potential customers in several different places, and in a number of different ways, before you can convert them to purchase.

Orders

Although most companies that allow mobile payments, PAYTM for example, use apps to facilitate the process there are those who allow customers to use text messages to place orders. Domino’s Pizza is one notable example.

Discount Coupons or Vouchers

Creating discount vouchers and coupons can be a bit of a headache, especially with all of the sites on the web dedicated to sharing promo codes that can be used to get money off.

Virtual Gifts

Gift company is a virtual gift card, sent via text message, that allows recipients to collect a real gift in a store. For example, you could use it to send a gift voucher to a friend to cover the cost of a meal in a particular restaurant.

Appointments / Reminders

One of the biggest problems for doctors, dental doctors and anyone else who operates their business on an appointment basis is no-shows. Manually making calls or sending out emails about appointments can help reduce this.

Alerts

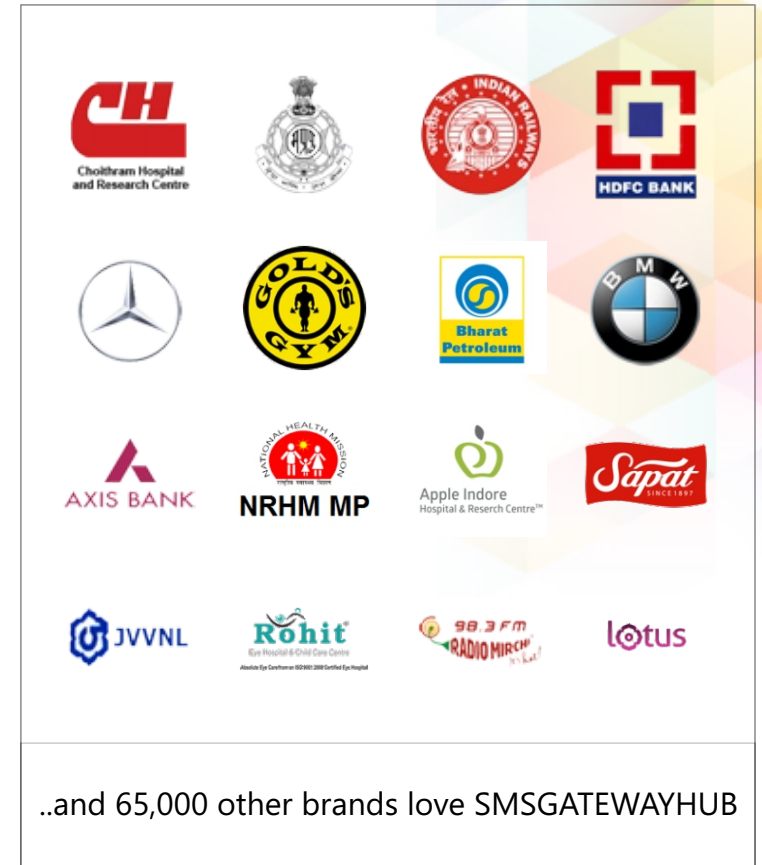

With just a little tweaking, you can use your mobile phone to receive email alerts as text messages. For example, Insteon makes it possible to receive their service notifications (usually sent as an email) as an SMS message.

Goods Tracking

It’s now the norm for both brands like Amazon, Argos etc. and delivery providers such as Yodel and Hermes to offer delivery updates and tracking notifications. In most instances, this includes SMS.
